DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 27-28 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Guan et al. (USPN 6,149,882).

Guan discloses a parallel fixed bed reactor and fluid contacting apparatus. The fluid contacting apparatus comprises a fluid mixing apparatus (22), which comprises test fluid sources (52) in the fluid connection with conventional mass flow controllers (54,pump). The mass flow controllers (54) adjust the amount of each test fluid constituents. Isolation valves (56) allow each fluid source to be taken off line. The entrance control volume (14) provides the vessels (12) with test fluid at a constant pressure. Multiport valve (78) ensures that test fluids get routed to determined vessels.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 21-26, 29 and 30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Lebl et al. (USPN 6,045,755).

Lebl teaches an apparatus for combinatorial chemistry synthesis. The apparatus comprises a chamber for preparing air-sensitive substances; means for protecting the substance (glass or plastic surface; or the charged gas that is heavier than the inert gas; col. 13, lines 10-19) a test reactor (reaction vessel); means (robot) for transferring the substance from the synthesis chamber to the test reactor (col. 13, lines 13-40); means for freeing within the test reactor, the substance (col. 13, lines 33-40). Claim 22 requires the synthesis chamber to have a substance carrier. This can be the bottom of the container, just about anything within the container. Also claim 22 has limitations that describe a container, all of which are disclosed by Lebl. A gas tight cover is disclosed for sealing the container (col. 121, lines 24-65). The valve reaction vessel serves as a lock that is operably linked to the test reactor. It is inherent that the robots used for the embodiments described in the prior art are electronically controlled and fully automatic.

Lebl does not teach a reactor that includes a stirring device.

Lebl teaches that the reaction vessels are used for mixing reagents and samples, it is well known in the art that stirring a reaction mixture speeds up the reaction and provides a homogenous mixture. Therefore it would have been obvious to one having an ordinary skill in the art to modify Lebl to include a stirring device to speed up the mixing of the sample and reagents.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 21-30 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
